Austrian Airlines

© Austrian Airlines

Austrian Airlines (AUA) is Austria's largest carrier. It serves a global network of about 130 destinations. The Austrian Group transports some 11.3 million passengers per year. It has been a wholly-owned Lufthansa subsidiary since 2009.

Scope of project

All ten Austrian Airlines long-haul jets – six Boeing B767s and four Boeing B777s – are being modernized with a new interior.

Lantal products and services

The contract involved the following products and services:

- Ready-made seat covers for Economy and Business Class
- Pneumatic Comfort System in Business Class, integrated in Thompson Aero Seating Vantage seats
- Literature pockets in leather with embroidered logo
- Pleated curtains as cabin dividers

Customer experience/benefits

The Pneumatic Comfort System (PCS) in the new Business Class seats offers passengers individually adjustable comfort while sitting, relaxing, or sleeping in the fully lie-flat bed mode. Concurrently, the airline gains significant operational advantages.

The ready-to-fit seat covers and the newly developed leather literature pockets were designed and manufactured by Lantal and delivered to the seat maker. AUA benefited from simplified project management and process handling.

In service since 2013.
